The mellow Moonlight Villa is a labour of love, inspired by a love story that began with a fashion shoot on the very cliff where this remarkable home now stands.

Once upon a time, a beautiful Taiwanese model was posing in a wedding gown; but alas! she was without a male model to pose as her groom. Then the 'bride' spots a handsome and brave surfer watching the scene unfold from some rocks nearby. She is bold enough to ask him to help out ...

The American surfer spends part of every year in Bali, riding the waves on Uluwatu's world-class barreling reef break. After this fortuitous meeting he decides to stay in Bali full time and his model-bride gives up her career in Taiwan to join him. Not long after that fateful wedding shoot, the couple pose for more wedding photos; but this time the nuptials are their own. To support their life in Bali, they decide to build a dream villa on the Uluwatu cliff where they first met and let it to guests. And so Moonlight Villa was conceived, with love, around the same time as the couple's first child. And they all lived happily ever after.

Standing on the edge of a gorge, with tumbling terraced gardens, the multi-level, four-bedroom property is distinguished by floor-to-ceiling glass walls to maximise the eye-boggling 360-degree vista of forest, ocean and the mountains.

Moonlight Villa is a place to lose oneself. The rooftop terrace is open to the sky and, by day, this sunny lounge is a great look-out spot for watching butterflies, kingfishers and monkeys cavorting in the thickly-wooded valley below. By night, when the stars are shining and the moon is full, and stories are being told over glasses of wine, it is easy to understand how this shimmering glass edifice got its name.
